ABSTRACT

The focus of this bibliography is the foreign medical graduate in the United States. Citations deal with this subject from several perspectives, including education of foreign medical graduates abroad, the flow of foreign medical graduates to the United States, and their training and utilization in American medicine. The references were compiled with the aid of MEDLARS (The Medical Literature Analysis and Retrieval System of the National Library of Medicine), updated by Index Medicus, and expanded through current publications and referrals. The cut-off date for the literature search for this first edition of the bibliography was September 1972.

PREFACE

The focus of this bibliography is the foreign medical graduate in the United States. It deals with this subject from several perspectives, including education of foreign medical graduates, the flow of foreign medical graduates to the United States, and their training and utilization in medicine. The references were compiled with the aid of MEDLARS (the Medical Literature Analysis and Retrieval System of the National Library of Medicine), updated by Index Medicus, and expanded to include current publications and referrals. The cut-off date for the literature search for this bibliography was September 1972.

Each entry in the bibliography is listed in three ways. In Section 1, citations are listed alphabetically by author's last name (or title in the absence of a cited author) and identification number in the far left column. Words in parentheses below the title are included for indexing purposes.

Section 2 rearranges the same material by a Key Word in Context (KWIC) index. Titles are listed alphabetically by last name. In addition, keywords in the title and in parentheses are alphabetically indexed. For example:

1310 HALBERSTAM, J.L.: DASCO, M.M.
FOREIGN AND UNITED STATES RESIDENTS IN UNIVERSITY-
AFFILIATED TEACHING HOSPITALS
(STATISTICS, INTERN)

This entry will appear in the KWIC index under Dasco, Halberstam, Hospitals, Intern, Residents, Statistics, and University-affiliated. The indexed words align down the center of the page. The rest of the title is printed on the line as space permits. Because the computer prints the same number of characters per line, some lines begin or end with a word fragment. The complete title may be found through the identification number in the left hand column.

Section 3 presents a short listing according to the source of the reference, giving the identification number. Articles are organized by abbreviated journal titles.

The bibliography is part of the National Institutes of Health computer retrieval system, capable of continuous updating. Please bring any additions or corrections to the attention of the Office of International Health Manpower Studies, Division of Manpower Intelligence, Bureau of Health Education, National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Maryland 20014.

PREFACE

The Office of International Health Manpower Studies of the Division of Manpower Intelligence is part as a center for international health manpower information exchange. A bibliographic is the element of the exchange, and this publication represents a first effort in that direction.

The focus of this bibliography is the foreign medical graduate in the United States. Citations are on this subject from several perspectives, including education of foreign medical graduates abroad, foreign medical graduates to the United States, and their training and utilization in American hospitals. The references were compiled with the aid of MEDLARS (the Medical Literature Analysis and Retrieval System of the National Library of Medicine), updated by Index Medicus, and expanded through personal communications and referrals. The cut-off date for the literature search for this first edition of the bibliography was September 1972.

Each entry in the bibliography is listed in three ways. In Section 1, citations are organized alphabetically by author's last name (or title in the absence of a cited author) and identified by a number in the far left column. Words in parentheses below the title are included for indexing.

Section 2 rearranges the same material by a Key Word in Context (KWIC) index. This list includes citations alphabetically by last name. In addition, keywords in the title and in parentheses below the title are alphabetically indexed. For example:

- 10 HALBERSTAM, J.L.: DASCO, M.M.
FOREIGN AND UNITED STATES RESIDENTS IN UNIVERSITY-
AFFILIATED TEACHING HOSPITALS
(STATISTICS, INTERN)

In the KWIC index under Dasco, Halberstam, Hospitals, Intern, Residents, Statistics, Teaching, University-affiliated. The indexed words align down the center of the page. The rest of the entry is on the same line as space permits. Because the computer prints the same number of characters in each line, lines begin or end with a word fragment. The complete title may be found through the citation in the left hand column.

Section 3 presents a short listing according to the source of the reference, giving only the number. Articles are organized by abbreviated journal titles.

This bibliography is part of the National Institutes of Health computer retrieval system and is continuously updating. Please bring any additions or corrections to the attention of the Office of International Health Manpower Studies, Division of Manpower Intelligence, Bureau of Health Manpower Studies, National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Maryland 20014.
